Piedmont Propulsion Systems Hosts Congresswoman Virginia Foxx

Winston-Salem, NC, March 29, 2016 – On Tuesday, March 29th, Piedmont Propulsion Systems, LLC (PPS) had the honor of hosting Representative Virginia Foxx at its facility for a reception organized by the Aeronautical Repair Station Association (ARSA). In attendance were senior executives from local aircraft maintenance companies including HAECO, North State Aviation and Piedmont Aviation Component Services.

PPS, HAECO and ARSA honored Rep. Foxx for her tireless efforts to reduce waste and improve competition in Department of Defense (DOD) contracting in order to make funds available for DOD modernization.

In addition, the group honored Dr. Foxx for her efforts to renew Perkins funding for technical workforce development. As home to world-class aerospace companies like PPS, HAECO, North State, Triumph, B/E Aerospace, HondaJet and others, the Piedmont Triad area has a large and growing need for skilled technicians in many trades. Effective technical workforce development programs will help North Carolina maintain its position as a preeminent location for aircraft and aircraft component maintenance for the worldwide aviation market.
